

seriously impaired unless he has complete and current information on local and area job opportunities. Intelligent forecasts cannot be made unless sufficient information of an accurate nature is available. In this area information is obtained through consultation with business, labor and Employment Service officials; by regular reading of the following periodicals; Labor Market Letter, a mimeographed summary of employment situations in the State of Indiana; The Labor Market, a monthly magazine containing excellent labor information on a national scale; and Labor Market Information, a bulletin which treats labor market problems on a national scale. All of these publications are issued by the United States Employment Service, and information regarding them can be obtained at the local offices of this organization.

Armed with sufficient information a good counselor can develop and maintain a guidance program the value of which will be readily recognized as an educational service.
